

The Booked Call Engine

$3,000 → $48,000

MONTHLY REVENUE · FOUR MONTHS

That was my own business. Not a client's — mine.

Nothing about it was clever. I didn't grow an audience, rebuild a website, or find targeting nobody else knew about. I fixed the offer first, worked out what a booked call was allowed to cost me, built the funnel that fit, and made sure people turned up to the calls I'd paid for.

Four things, in that order. The order is most of it — I'd spent a long time doing the fourth one first.

This is that build, written down exactly as I run it — the settings, the scripts, the messages, the numbers worth watching. Fill in the blanks and it's yours.

Twenty things that break, and the fix for each

SECTION 01

Build the offer

Before the ceiling, before tracking, before a single ad. Ads amplify an offer — they never create one. A great offer with mediocre ads makes money; perfect ads pointed at a weak offer just lose it faster.

Eight parts. Fill each one in, in order, and the end of this section assembles them into a single statement you'll use in every ad, page and call that follows.

1. Who, exactly

Narrower than feels comfortable. "Busy professionals" is not an avatar — it's a way of avoiding the choice.

FILL IN

I work with [AGE RANGE] [GENDER, IF IT'S TRUE] who are [JOB OR LIFE SITUATION] and [THE CONSTRAINT THEY LIVE WITH].

I work with 30–45 year old women who are nurses on rotating shifts and can't train at the same time two days running.

WHY NARROW WINS ON EVERY METRIC AT ONCE

A narrow avatar writes your ad copy for you, raises click-through because the reader recognises themselves, raises close rate because you've solved this exact problem before, and lets you charge more because you're a specialist rather than a generalist.

The fear is that you shrink your market. In practice you are picking the slice you already convert best, and paid traffic will find you more of them than you could ever reach organically.

2. The promise

Outcome, timeframe, and the thing they dread that you remove. All three, or it isn't a promise.

FILL IN

[OUTCOME THEY'D NOTICE DAY TO DAY] in [WEEKS] weeks, without [THE THING THEY DREAD].

Get through a full shift without the 3pm crash, in 12 weeks, without 5am starts or giving up wine.

Make the outcome felt, not numeric. "Lose 20lbs" is a weaker promise than "get your energy back" — it's less emotionally specific, easier to disprove, and it's the phrasing that gets your ads rejected. Pick something they'd notice on a Tuesday.

Be honest about the timeframe. Body composition changes show up around 12–16 weeks. Promising it in 6 sells the first month and loses the client in the third.

3. The mechanism — the part that sets your price

This is the single biggest lever in the whole section. The mechanism is why yours works when the last three things didn't. Without one you're selling "coaching", which is a commodity priced by the hour. With one you're selling a specific method, which is priced by the outcome.

ARCHETYPE	THE CLAIM	FITS A COACH WHO...
Sequencing	We fix [X] before touching [Y] — doing it the other way round is why it failed before	Has a strong opinion about order
Constraint-fit	Built around [THEIR REAL CONSTRAINT], not adapted to it afterwards	Serves one specific lifestyle
Minimum dose	[N] sessions of [N] minutes. Everything else was optional	Works with time-poor clients
Adjustment cycle	We change the plan every [N] days based on [WHAT YOU MEASURE]	Is systematic and data-led
Root cause	Most [WHO] blame [WRONG CAUSE]. It's actually [REAL CAUSE]	Has a contrarian, defensible view

FILL IN — ONE SENTENCE, NO JARGON

Most [WHO] think the problem is [WHAT THEY BLAME]. It's actually [THE REAL MECHANISM], which is why [WHAT THEY KEEP TRYING] makes it worse. So we [WHAT YOU DO INSTEAD] first.

Most shift workers think the problem is willpower. It's actually that rotating sleep wrecks appetite signalling, which is why eating less makes the next week worse. So we fix sleep anchors and protein floor before we touch calories at all.

TEST IT LIKE THIS

Say your mechanism out loud to someone outside fitness. If they can repeat it back, it's a mechanism. If they say "so... personal training?", you don't have one yet — and no amount of ad spend will fix that.

You almost certainly already have one. It's the thing you explain on every sales call and have never written down.

4. What they actually get

Five lines maximum, each tied to the mechanism. Deliverables that don't serve the mechanism are padding, and experienced buyers read padding as weakness.

FILL IN

- [THE TRAINING: format, frequency, where]
- [THE NUTRITION: structure, not a meal plan]
- [THE CHECK-IN: how often, what happens in it]
- [ACCESS: how they reach you, and the honest response time]
- [THE ADJUSTMENT: what changes, and how often]

State the access honestly. "WhatsApp, answered within a day on weekdays" keeps clients happier than "24/7 support" that you resent by week three.

5. The structure

How the money is arranged, which turns out to matter more than the number itself. Each structure can absorb a different amount of traffic cost before the economics break:

STRUCTURE	SHAPE	CLIENT VALUE	CAN AFFORD PER BOOKED CALL
Month-to-month	$150/mo, cancel anytime	$450	$32
Minimum commitment	$600/mo × 4 months	$2,400	$168
Recurring renewal	$2,000 per 6 months	$3,000	$210
Deposit hybrid	$2,500 up front + $300 × 6	$4,300	$301
Paid in full	$6,000 for 2 months, intensive	$6,000	$420

Month-to-month cannot run paid ads. At all. It can afford $32 per booked call and nothing you could buy comes close. If that's your current structure, changing it is the highest-value thing in this entire guide — worth more than any targeting or creative decision you will ever make.

Three rules when picking:

1. Match the term to the result. If the promise takes 12–16 weeks, the commitment is four months. Selling month-to-month on a twelve-week promise guarantees people leave before it works.
2. Take money up front where you honestly can. Up-front cash funds the ad spend that fills the next slot, and clients who pay more up front show up more.
3. Never discount the payment plan. Price it above the paid-in-full total. The plan removes a cash objection; it isn't the better deal.

6. The price

FILL IN

Paid in full: [$] · Plan: [$] × [] months · Total if plan: [$]

Minimum commitment: [] months

Two sanity checks before you move on:

- Is this worth 10× the price to them? If someone pays $2,400 to stop crashing at 3pm every shift for the next decade, that's an easy yes. If you can't make that case, the promise is too small — fix the promise, not the price.
- Would you pay it? If you'd hesitate, you'll communicate that hesitation on every call, and prospects read it instantly.

7. The guarantee

A guarantee isn't softness — it's a lever on close rate, and close rate multiplies straight through to what you can afford to pay for traffic.

WHAT A GUARANTEE IS ACTUALLY WORTH

Lifting close rate from 30% to 40% raises every ceiling in the table above by about a third, because it cuts the booked calls needed per signed client from 4.8 to 3.6.

That is the same effect as making your traffic a third cheaper — achieved by changing a sentence on your offer rather than by becoming better at Meta ads.

Guarantee the work, never the outcome. You control whether you deliver; you don't control whether they do.

THREE THAT HOLD UP

Recoup. Do [THE DEFINED WORK] for [N] weeks and if you haven't [THE MINIMUM OUTCOME], I coach you free until you do.

Process. Complete every check-in for [N] weeks and if you can honestly say you got nothing, full refund.

First two weeks. If it isn't what I described within 14 days, full refund, no argument.

The recoup version is strongest: it costs you time rather than money, it only triggers for people who did the work, and "I'll keep going until it works" is the most reassuring sentence a sceptical buyer can hear.

8. What it isn't

Two or three lines. Saying this out loud raises conversion among the people who do fit, and it is the cheapest filter you will ever install.

FILL IN

This isn't for you if you want [WHAT YOU DON'T DO], if you're after [THE SHORTCUT YOU REFUSE], or if you can't commit [THE MINIMUM REALISTIC INPUT].

Assemble it

One sentence. This becomes your ad hook, your landing page headline, and the first thing you say on every call.

YOUR OFFER STATEMENT

I help [WHO] [OUTCOME] in [TIMEFRAME] through [MECHANISM], without [WHAT THEY DREAD] — for [PRICE] over [TERM], guaranteed by [GUARANTEE].

I help shift-working nurses get through a full shift without the 3pm crash in 12 weeks, by fixing sleep anchors and protein before touching calories, without 5am starts — for $600 a month over four months, and if they do the check-ins and nothing changes I keep coaching free until it does.

The stress test

Eight questions. Any "no" is cheaper to fix now than after $600 of traffic.

- ☐ Can you say the whole offer in one sentence, without notes?
- ☐ Does the promise have a timeframe you'd defend?
- ☐ Could a stranger repeat your mechanism back to you?
- ☐ Does every deliverable serve that mechanism?
- ☐ Does the term match how long the result actually takes?
- ☐ Would you pay this price yourself?
- ☐ Can you name who it's not for?
- ☐ Does your structure clear $150 per booked call? (Section 2 proves it)

Don't move on until the last one is yes. Section 2 is where you test it with your own numbers, and it is the gate on every dollar you spend after this.

SECTION 02

Test the offer: your ceiling

You have an offer. Now find out whether it can survive paid traffic — the most you can afford to pay for one booked call. If you skip this, everything downstream is guesswork.

$$\text{Ceiling} = \text{Show \%} \times \text{Close \%} \times (\text{Client value} \div 3)$$

The divide-by-three is the rule that keeps you solvent: a client has to be worth at least three times what you pay to acquire them. Anything tighter and one refund or one bad month wipes the account.

Fill this in

A — What one client pays you in total	$ _____
B — Of people who book, how many show up	_____ %
C — Of people who show, how many buy	_____ %
D — Your ceiling: $B \times C \times (A \div 3)$	\$ _____

Don't have B and C? Use 70% and 30%. Those are competent-operator numbers, not best case. If your real numbers come in lower, your ceiling drops with them.

Those five structures from Section 1 carry very different ceilings — $32 at month-to-month, $420 paid in full. Run your own numbers above and compare them to the structure you picked.

If you need to raise your ceiling

Four levers, in the order they are easiest to move:

1. Add an upfront payment. $1,500 down then monthly beats pure monthly on day-one cash and on retention.
2. Extend the minimum term. Four months instead of month-to-month. Body composition results take 12–16 weeks; a one-month offer promises something it can't deliver.
3. Raise the price. The fastest lever and the one most coaches avoid. A 20% increase moves your ceiling 20%.
4. Fix show rate before close rate. Easier to move, and Section 13 is entirely about it.

Don't model retention past 12 months. You can't forecast it honestly, and building a budget on it is how accounts go broke slowly.

Choose your funnel

Two ways to get a call booked. They cost different amounts, need different budgets, and fail for different reasons. Pick deliberately — most coaches drift into one by accident and never find out the other suited them better.

Path A — the DM funnel

Ad → they tap Send message → you have a conversation → you offer two times → call booked.

A human qualifies before anyone touches a calendar. Cheap conversations, high volume, and it needs someone answering messages inside five minutes.

Path B — the call funnel

Ad → landing page → they watch or read → application form → calendar → call booked.

The page and the form do the qualifying. Nobody touches it until the call itself. More expensive per booking, and it runs while you sleep.

What each actually costs

	PATH A — DM	PATH B — CALL FUNNEL
Cost per conversation / page click	$4–12	$1.50–3.00
Converts to booking at	15–30%	4–10% of clicks
Cost per booked call	$30–80	$60–200
Show rate	70–80%	45–65%
Cost per call actually held	$40–115	$110–350
Minimum daily budget	$20	$70–100
Your time per booking	10–20 min	0 min

THE SHOW-RATE GAP IS THE THING NOBODY TELLS YOU

Path A shows up better — often 20 points better — for one reason: they already spoke to a person. A booking made after a real conversation is an appointment with someone you've met. A booking made from a form is a line in a calendar.

So compare the paths on cost per call held, never on cost per call booked. On the booked number Path A looks twice as good; on the held number it often looks three times as good.

When each one wins

CHOOSE PATH A — DM, IF...	CHOOSE PATH B — CALL FUNNEL, IF...
You're starting, or budget is under $50/day	You have $70–100/day minimum to spend
You can reply within 5 minutes most of the day	You can't, or won't, be on your phone
You don't yet know the common objections	You already know them cold
Your offer needs explaining	Your offer is proven and easy to state
You're local or niche, small audience	You're online, large audience
You have a setter, or you are the setter	You want it running without anyone

If you're under $50/day, this isn't a choice. Run Path A. The call funnel needs volume to work at all, for the reason below.

Why the call funnel needs more budget

Meta optimises properly once an ad set gets roughly 50 conversion events a week. Below that it never leaves the learning phase and delivery stays erratic and expensive.

PATH	EVENT BEING OPTIMISED	TYPICAL COST	SPEND NEEDED FOR 50/WEEK
A — DM	Conversation started	$4–12	$30–85/day
B — optimise for form submit	Lead	$15–40	$105–285/day
B — optimise for booking	Schedule	$60–200	$430+/day

At $20/day a DM campaign gets 12–35 conversations a week — not ideal, but enough to move. A call funnel optimising for bookings gets two or three. It will never learn.

So if you run Path B under $150/day, optimise for the form submit (Lead), not the booking (Schedule). You trade some lead quality for an algorithm that actually works. Switch to Schedule once you're past 50 bookings a week.

The sequence that works best

If you have the time, don't choose — sequence. Run Path A first and let it build Path B for you:

1. Weeks 1–4: Path A only. $20/day. Cheap conversations, and every one teaches you something.
2. Keep a note of the objections. Every "how much is it", every "I don't have time", every reason someone went quiet. This is free market research most coaches throw away.
3. Weeks 5–6: write the landing page from those notes. Your DM transcripts are the copy. The objection you answered nineteen times is your headline.
4. Week 7+: launch Path B alongside. Don't turn Path A off — run both and compare cost per call held.

WHY THIS ORDER BEATS STARTING WITH A LANDING PAGE

A landing page written before you've had a hundred DM conversations is a guess about what your market objects to. A landing page written after them is a transcript.

Coaches who start with Path B usually spend $1,500 learning what forty DM conversations would have told them for $300.

Running both at once

Once both work, the standard structure is:

- Cold traffic → Path A. Cheaper to learn on, and the conversation handles scepticism a page can't.
- Warm and retargeting → Path B. Anyone who engaged, watched 50% of a video, or hit the page and didn't book. They already know you, so the page converts far better than it does cold.
- Separate campaigns, separate budgets. Never the same campaign. You cannot read the numbers if they're mixed.

Which sections apply to you: Path A runs on Section 8 and Section 9. Path B runs on Section 10 and Section 11. Everything from Section 12 onward — the calendar, the show-up system, optimization, the scorecard — applies to both.

SECTION 04

Ad account setup

Forty minutes of admin that prevents the two most expensive failures: a restricted account, and an account that never learns.

Business Manager

Business portfolio	One, under your own name or business
Two-factor auth	Required on every admin account
Admins	Two people minimum
Ad account name	Business name – Acquisition
Time zone	Your own. Cannot change later
Currency	Your own. Cannot change later
Payment methods	Two. A declined card pauses everything
Spending limit	Leave unset

DO THIS BEFORE ANYTHING ELSE

Turn on two-factor authentication and add a second admin and a backup card. A locked account with one admin and one declined card is the single most common way a coach loses a working funnel for three weeks.

Assets to connect

Facebook page	Published, profile photo, 3+ posts
Instagram account	Connected in Business settings
Domain	Verified via DNS TXT record
Pixel / dataset	One, named after the business
Attribution setting	7-day click, 1-day view

Verify your domain even if you think you don't need to. Without it you cannot prioritise your own conversion events, and iOS traffic reports badly.

A page that doesn't get you rejected

- Real profile and cover photo, not a logo on white
- At least three posts, none of them ads
- Contact details and a website link filled in
- No before/after body images in the page's recent posts — they trip health policy review

Policy rule: never use before/after body photos, never imply weight-loss amounts, never address someone's body directly. "Lose 30lbs" and "tired of being overweight?" both get rejected. Section 6 writes around this.

☐ Two-factor on, second admin added

☐ Two payment methods on file

☐ Domain verified by DNS

☐ Page and Instagram connected

☐ Attribution set to 7-day click

SECTION 05

Tracking

Do this before you write a single ad. An account that learns from day one is worth more than a prettier ad, and an account that was never instrumented can never tell you what a call costs.

Five things, in this order. Each has a test. Don't move on until the test passes.

#	INSTALL	THE TEST THAT PROVES IT
1	Pixel on every page	Meta Pixel Helper shows it firing on your offer page
2	Domain verified	Green tick in Business settings → Brand safety
3	Lead or Schedule event on booking confirmation	Book a test call yourself. Event appears in Events Manager within 20 minutes
4	Conversions API	Event shows Server as well as Browser in Events Manager
5	Event prioritised	Your booking event sits at position 1 in Aggregated Event Measurement

WHY THE CONVERSIONS API IS NOT OPTIONAL

Browser-only tracking loses a meaningful share of conversions to ad blockers, privacy settings and iOS. Those conversions still happen — Meta just never learns from them, so it keeps optimising on partial data.

Most booking tools (GoHighLevel, Calendly, Hubspot) have a native Meta CAPI integration. Turn it on. It is a settings toggle, not a development project.

Attach a value to the booking

Send your booking event with a value, not bare. Use client value × show % × close % — the expected revenue of one booked call.

WORKED EXAMPLE

$2,400 client value × 0.70 show × 0.30 close = $504 per booked call.

Send value: 504 and currency: USD with every Schedule event.

This is what lets Meta report a return figure at all, and it is why most coaches' accounts show nothing in that column. It takes two minutes and almost nobody does it.

The test transaction

1. Open your offer page in a private window
2. Book a call using a real email and phone
3. Open Events Manager → Test events
4. Confirm the event lands, carries a value, and shows both Browser and Server
5. Cancel the test booking

Do not skip this. Watching one event land end to end is the only proof that any of the above actually works. Assuming it works is how coaches spend $2,000 before discovering nothing was recorded.

SECTION 06

Ad scripts

Six frameworks. Replace the bracketed parts and you have a running ad. Build at least eight before you launch — one ad is a guess, eight is a test.

Before you write: the first two seconds carry everything. Never open with "Hey guys" or your own name. Open with the reader's situation.

1. The specific result

Your strongest ad, every time. Works because it is a claim about a named person, not about the reader's body.

SCRIPT

[FIRST NAME] is a [AGE]-year-old [JOB] with [CONSTRAINT – two kids, 60-hour weeks, shift work].

Twelve weeks ago she couldn't [SPECIFIC THING SHE COULDN'T DO].

Last week she [SPECIFIC THING SHE DID].

She trains [NUMBER] times a week for [MINUTES] minutes. No [THING THEY FEAR – meal prep Sundays, 5am starts, giving up wine].

I coach [WHO YOU WORK WITH] in [CITY / ONLINE]. If you want the same, send me the word [KEYWORD] and I'll show you what her plan looked like.

Sarah is a 41-year-old nurse with two kids and rotating night shifts. Twelve weeks ago she couldn't get through a shift without three coffees and a crash at 3pm. Last week she ran her first 5k. She trains three times a week for 40 minutes. No 5am starts, no giving up wine. Send me the word ENERGY and I'll show you her plan.

2. Problem, agitate, solve

SCRIPT

You're [DOING THE RIGHT THING] and still [NOT GETTING THE RESULT].

So you try harder. [THING THEY ESCALATE TO]. Then [NEXT THING]. Three weeks later you're [WHERE THEY END UP] and quietly wondering if it's just you.

It isn't. It's that [THE ACTUAL MECHANISM THEY'RE MISSING].

I've walked [NUMBER] [WHO] through fixing exactly that. Send [KEYWORD] and I'll tell you where to start.

You're in the gym five days a week and the scale hasn't moved since February. So you add cardio. Then you cut carbs. Three weeks later you're exhausted, eating 1,200 calories, and quietly wondering if it's just you. It isn't. It's that you've been under-eating protein badly enough that you're losing muscle, not fat.

3. Myth bust

SCRIPT

[COMMON ADVICE] is why [WHO] stay stuck.

Here's what actually happens: [THE MECHANISM, IN ONE SENTENCE].

What works instead is [YOUR APPROACH, IN ONE SENTENCE] — and it takes [LESS TIME / LESS RESTRICTION] than what you're doing now.

Send [KEYWORD] if you want the detail.

"Eat less, move more" is why busy professionals stay stuck. Here's what actually happens: you cut 800 calories, your body cuts your daily movement by about the same, and you stall at a lower intake than you started with. What works instead is eating more while training in a way that makes your body want to keep the muscle.

4. The callout

Cheap conversations, loose qualification. Good for volume, pair it with tight DM screening.

SCRIPT

This is for you if:

- You're [SITUATION ONE]
- You've tried [FAILED APPROACH] and it didn't hold
- You have [REALISTIC TIME] a week, not [UNREALISTIC TIME]
- You want [OUTCOME] without [THE THING THEY WON'T DO]

If that's three out of four, send me [KEYWORD].

It isn't for you if you're after [WHAT YOU DON'T DO].

5. The objection pre-handle

Run this as your second ad to anyone who engaged and didn't convert.

SCRIPT

" [THEIR EXACT OBJECTION, IN THEIR WORDS] "

I hear it most weeks. It's fair, and here's the honest answer: [THE ANSWER, WITHOUT SELLING] .

[CLIENT NAME] said the same thing before starting. [WHAT HAPPENED] .

Still unsure? Send [KEYWORD] and ask me directly. I'll tell you if it's not a fit.

"I don't have time to meal prep." I hear it most weeks. It's fair, and here's the honest answer: none of my clients meal prep. We build your plan around what you already eat. Marcus said the same thing before starting — he eats out four nights a week and he's down two trouser sizes.

6. Direct offer

Your best performer with warm audiences and retargeting. Weakest cold.

SCRIPT

I'm taking on [NUMBER] new [WHO] this month.

You get [DELIVERABLE ONE] , [DELIVERABLE TWO] , and [DELIVERABLE THREE] .

It's for people who [QUALIFIER] . It's not for people who [DISQUALIFIER] .

Send [KEYWORD] and I'll send you the details and what it costs.

COMPLIANCE REWRITES THAT STILL CONVERT

GETS REJECTED	WRITE THIS INSTEAD
Lose 30lbs in 12 weeks	What 12 weeks looked like for Sarah
Tired of being overweight?	Tired of starting over every January?
Before and after photo	Client on camera saying what changed
Transform your body	Train in a way that holds up around a real job
Are you struggling with your weight?	Most plans assume you have two spare hours a day

The pattern: talk about your work and your clients, never about the reader's body. Meta's health policy objects to implied personal attributes, not to fitness.

Creative

You need ten assets to launch. Filmed on a phone, in one afternoon.

Specs

Aspect ratio	9:16 vertical
Resolution	1080 × 1920
Length	15–45 seconds
Captions	Burned in, always
Hook	First words out, no intro
Audio	Phone mic is fine indoors, close up
Framing	Eyes at upper third, head not centred

Burn the captions in. Most of your audience watches on mute. An uncaptioned ad is an ad nobody hears.

The shot list

ASSET	COUNT	WHAT IT IS
Client testimonial	2	A real client on camera, interviewed
Talking head	3	You, straight to camera, one script each
Hook variants	3	Same talking head, three different openings
Static with text	2	One claim on a plain background

Three hook variants on one body is the cheapest test you will ever run. The hook does most of the work.

The testimonial interview

Ask these seven, in order. Don't script their answers; the unpolished version converts better. Twenty minutes per client, cut to 45 seconds.

ASK EXACTLY THIS

1. What was going on for you before we started?
2. What had you already tried?
3. What made you finally reach out?
4. What were you worried about before you said yes?
5. What's different now — something specific, not a number?
6. What surprised you?
7. What would you say to someone sitting where you were?

THE TWO THAT MATTER

Questions 4 and 5. Question 4 gives you your objection-handling ad in the client's own words. Question 5 gives you the specific, non-numeric result that passes policy review — "I can get through a shift without crashing" rather than "I lost 18lbs."

Lead the cut with their answer to 4 or 5. Never with "I was so sceptical but..."

Three talking-head hooks to film

FILM ALL THREE, SAME OUTFIT, SAME SPOT

- A. "If you're [DOING THE RIGHT THING] and nothing's moving, it's almost always one of three things."
- B. "[CLIENT NAME] trains three times a week for forty minutes. Here's what we changed."
- C. "The advice to [COMMON ADVICE] is why [WHO] stay stuck. Here's what actually happens."

Rough beats polished. An ad that looks like a post outperforms an ad that looks like an ad, and version one filmed today beats version two filmed never.

SECTION 08

Path A — building the DM campaign

One campaign, one ad set, four ads, $20 a day. Small on purpose — you are buying information before you buy clients.

Campaign level

Objective	Engagement
Conversion location	Messaging apps
Campaign budget optimisation	Off
Special ad category	None
A/B test	Off
Campaign name	Cold – DM – [MONTH]

Ad set level

Daily budget	$20.00
Optimisation event	Conversations
Messaging apps	Messenger + Instagram Direct
Schedule	Run continuously
Location	[CITY + 25mi] or whole country if online
Age	[YOUR RANGE, e.g. 28-55]
Gender	Your client base, honestly
Detailed targeting	Empty
Advantage detailed targeting	On
Advantage+ placements	On
Audience size shown	500,000 – 3,000,000

LEAVE THE INTERESTS EMPTY

Hand-picked interests were how this worked in 2018. Meta's targeting now reads your creative and finds the audience faster than you can describe it, and interest stacks mostly shrink your pool and raise your costs.

Your creative is your targeting. An ad that opens "if you're a nurse on rotating shifts" finds nurses on rotating shifts.

Ad level

Number of ads	4, all in the one ad set
Format	Single image or video
Primary text	One script from Section 6
Call to action	Send message
Message template	Custom – see Section 9
Advantage+ creative	Off while testing

Four ads, four different scripts, same ad set. Meta will push spend to the winner within a few days. Turning Advantage+ creative off while testing matters — you want to know which script won, not which auto-crop won.

The keyword trick

End every Path A ad with a single word to send — ENERGY, PLAN, COACH, whatever fits the ad. Three reasons it matters:

- It gives a hesitant person something trivially easy to do
- It tells you which ad produced the conversation, without any tracking setup
- It triggers the right auto-reply if you run more than one offer

Use a different keyword per ad and your inbox becomes your attribution report.

The one audience to add in week two

Upload your existing client list as a Custom Audience, then build a 1% Lookalike from it. Your buyers are the only first-party signal you own, and a lookalike off thirty real clients beats any interest stack you could assemble.

- ☐ Tracking verified (Section 5) before launch
- ☐ Four ads live in one ad set, one keyword each
- ☐ Detailed targeting left empty
- ☐ $20/day, running continuously

☐ Auto-reply live and tested (Section 9)

☐ Calendar open and tested (Section 12)

☐ Reminder sequence armed (Section 13)

Then leave it alone for 72 hours. Every edit restarts the learning phase and throws away what the account just learned. The urge to fix it on day one is the single most expensive instinct in paid media.

SECTION 09

Path A — DM scripts

From their first message to a booked call. One question at a time, never a wall of text, and no price until you have earned the right to give it.

The rule that beats every script: reply within five minutes. Conversion roughly halves after the first hour. If you cannot answer inside five minutes during your stated hours, you need an auto-reply holding the slot.

Step 1 — The auto-reply

Fires the second they send your keyword. Buys you time without feeling like a bot.

SEND IMMEDIATELY

Hey [FIRST NAME] — thanks for reaching out 🙌

Quick one so I point you at the right thing: what's the main thing you're trying to sort out right now?

One question. Open-ended. No link, no pitch, no "I'll get back to you." You are starting a conversation, not acknowledging a ticket.

Step 2 — Qualify in three questions

One message at a time. Wait for each answer. Three questions, then you decide.

QUESTION ONE — THE SITUATION

Got it. How long's that been going on?

QUESTION TWO — WHAT THEY'VE TRIED

And what have you tried so far for it?

QUESTION THREE — THE CONSTRAINT

Makes sense. Realistically, how many days a week could you train — and roughly how long per session?

WHAT YOU'RE LISTENING FOR

Qualified: a specific problem, a real attempt to fix it, and three or more realistic days a week.

Not qualified: "just browsing", no timeline, under two days a week, or looking for a free plan. Be warm and close it out — see the exit script below.

Step 3 — The transition

The move everyone fumbles. Ask permission, then offer a specific time. Never "here's my link."

THE ASK

Okay — based on what you've said I think this is fixable, and it's probably not what you'd expect.

Easier to walk you through it than type it. I've got [DAY] at [TIME] or [DAY] at [TIME] — 20 minutes, no pitch, I'll tell you straight if I'm not the right fit. Which works?

Two specific times, not a link. A calendar link asks them to do work and decide alone. Two times asks them to pick. Send the link only after they choose one.

Step 4 — Lock it in

AFTER THEY PICK

Perfect. Here's the link to lock it in: [BOOKING LINK]

Takes 30 seconds. Use the phone number you actually answer — I'll call that one.

IF THEY BOOK

IMMEDIATELY

You're in for [DAY, TIME] 🙌

One thing before we talk: have a think about what you'd want to be different in 90 days. Doesn't need to be a number — just what you'd notice. That's where we'll start.

Anything comes up, message me here. Don't just no-show, I'd rather move it.

That last line is worth real money. It gives permission to reschedule, which converts a silent no-show into a kept appointment on another day.

The branches

"HOW MUCH IS IT?" — BEFORE THE CALL

ANSWER, DON'T DODGE

Depends what you need — it runs between [LOW] and [HIGH] depending on how much support you want.

I won't quote you properly without knowing your situation, which is what the 20 minutes is for. If it's miles outside your budget I'll say so on the call rather than waste your time.

Refusing to give a range reads as evasive and kills the thread. A range plus a reason keeps it alive.

NO REPLY AFTER YOUR FIRST QUESTION

+4 HOURS

No rush — still want me to take a look at this?

+1 DAY

Hey [FIRST NAME], didn't want to leave you hanging. Want me to send over what I'd do in your situation, or leave it for now?

+3 DAYS, THEN STOP

All good if the timing's off — I'll leave it here. If it comes back round, just message me. 👍

Three follow-ups, then stop. A fourth costs you more in goodwill than it recovers in bookings.

"I NEED TO THINK ABOUT IT"

REPLY

Course. What's the bit you're unsure about — whether it'd work for you, or the money?

Never argue. Name the two real options and let them tell you which. You cannot handle an objection you haven't identified.

NOT A FIT — THE EXIT

CLOSE IT WARMLY

Being straight with you — at [THEIR CONSTRAINT] I don't think I'd be able to get you a result worth what I charge, so I'd rather not take your money.

What I'd do in your position: [ONE GENUINELY USEFUL THING].

If things change, message me.

These people refer. Turning someone down well is marketing.

THREE THINGS THAT BREAK DM CONVERSION

Walls of text. One idea per message. If it needs scrolling, it needs splitting.

Pitching before qualifying. Three questions, then the ask. Never the other way round.

Leading with the link. The link goes out after they pick a time, never before.

SECTION 10

Path B — building the call campaign

Traffic straight to a page, a form, and a calendar. Nobody touches it until the call. Budget higher than Path A, and for a reason you must understand before you launch.

Do not launch this under $70/day. Below that the ad set never exits the learning phase, delivery is erratic, and you will conclude the funnel doesn't work when what didn't work was the budget.

Pick your optimisation event first

This single choice decides whether the campaign learns.

YOUR DAILY BUDGET	OPTIMISE FOR	WHY
$70–150	Lead (form submit)	Cheap enough to hit ~50/week. Some lead quality lost, algorithm works
$150–400	Lead, then test Schedule	Run both ad sets, compare cost per call held
$400+	Schedule (booking)	Enough volume to optimise on the event you actually want

Optimising for a booking you only get three of a week is the most common reason a coach's call funnel "doesn't work".

Campaign level

Objective	Leads
Conversion location	Website
Campaign budget optimisation	Off
Special ad category	None
Campaign name	Cold – Call funnel – [MONTH]

Ad set level

Daily budget	[$70 MINIMUM]
Conversion event	Lead (or Schedule above $400/day)
Attribution setting	7-day click, 1-day view
Location	[YOUR MARKET]
Age	[YOUR RANGE]
Detailed targeting	Empty
Advantage+ placements	On
Dynamic creative	Off while testing

Ad level

Number of ads	4–6 in one ad set
Destination	Website – your landing page URL
Call to action	Book now or Learn more
URL parameters	utm_source=meta&utm_campaign={{campaign.name}}&utm_content={{ad.name}}

PUT THE UTM PARAMETERS IN

Without them you cannot tell which ad produced a booked call — only which produced a click. Meta's own reporting under-reports by design, so the booking tool's record is your source of truth, and it only works if the tag arrives with the visitor.

Paste that string into the URL parameters field. Meta fills the braces in automatically.

The retargeting ad set — build it on day one

Path B leaks badly: 75–90% of people who reach your page leave without booking. Retargeting is where the call funnel earns back its higher cost, and almost nobody sets it up until month three.

AUDIENCE	WINDOW	WHAT TO SHOW THEM
Visited page, didn't book	14 days	The objection-handler ad
Watched 50%+ of a video ad	30 days	A client testimonial
Engaged with page or Instagram	30 days	The direct offer

Budget	$10–20/day, separate ad set
Optimisation event	Schedule – these people are warm
Frequency cap	Leave Meta to handle it under 30 days

Retargeting bookings routinely cost a third of cold ones. If your blended cost per call looks bad, this is usually the missing piece.

- ☐ Schedule event verified in Events Manager (Section 5)
- ☐ Landing page live and loads under 3 seconds on mobile
- ☐ Optimisation event matched to budget
- ☐ UTM parameters on every ad
- ☐ Retargeting audiences created
- ☐ Calendar open and tested (Section 12)
- ☐ Reminder sequence armed (Section 13) — matters more here than on Path A

SECTION 11

Path B — the page and the video

On Path A a conversation does the qualifying. Here the page and the form have to do it alone. Build it in this order.

The page, top to bottom

1. Headline — the outcome, for a named kind of person
2. One line of sub-copy — what it is and what it isn't
3. The video, or three short paragraphs if you won't film one
4. Button — above the fold, repeated after each section
5. Three proof blocks — client, situation, what changed
6. Who it's for / who it's not for — two short lists
7. What happens on the call — removes the "is this a sales pitch" fear
8. The form
9. One line about you — last, not first

One page, one action. No menu, no links out, no "about" tab. Every exit is a booking you paid for and lost.

Headline formulas

PICK ONE, FILL IT IN

1. How [WHO] are [OUTCOME] in [TIME] — without [THE THING THEY DREAD]
2. For [WHO] who are tired of [THE FAILED PATTERN]
3. [NUMBER] [WHO] have used this to [OUTCOME]. Here's how it works.

How shift-working nurses are getting their energy back in 12 weeks — without 5am starts or giving up wine.

Same compliance rule as the ads: describe your work and your clients, never the reader's body.

The video script

Four to six minutes. Filmed on a phone. Seven beats, in this order — the order is doing most of the work.

BEAT 1 — CALLOUT · 0:00–0:15

If you're [SITUATION] and [THE THING THAT ISN'T WORKING], this is for you. Give me four minutes and I'll show you why it's happening and what to do instead.

BEAT 2 — WHO YOU ARE · 0:15–0:35

I'm [NAME]. I coach [WHO]. Over the last [TIME] I've worked with [NUMBER] of them, and the same thing comes up almost every time.

BEAT 3 — THE REAL PROBLEM · 0:35–1:35

Most [WHO] think the problem is [WHAT THEY BLAME]. It isn't.

What's actually happening is [THE MECHANISM, PLAINLY]. Which is why [THE THING THEY KEEP TRYING] makes it worse, not better.

BEAT 4 — WHAT WORKS INSTEAD · 1:35–2:35

What works is [YOUR APPROACH IN ONE SENTENCE].

Three parts: [ONE], [TWO], [THREE]. That's it. It takes [REALISTIC TIME] a week.

BEAT 5 — PROOF · 2:35–3:20

[CLIENT] came to me [THEIR SITUATION]. We did exactly that. [WHAT CHANGED, SPECIFICALLY].

Same with [CLIENT TWO] — [ONE LINE].

BEAT 6 — THE CALL · 3:20–3:50

If you want me to map that out for your situation, book a call below. It's 20 minutes. I'll ask what you've tried, what's in the way, and what you want different in 90 days — then tell you what I'd do.

No presentation, no pressure. If I'm not the right fit I'll say so and point you somewhere better.

BEAT 7 — WHO IT ISN'T FOR · 3:50–4:10

One thing — this isn't for everyone. If you're after [WHAT YOU DON'T DO], I'm not your person. But if [THE QUALIFIER], fill the form in and let's talk.

BEAT 7 IS THE ONE PEOPLE CUT, AND IT'S THE ONE THAT WORKS

Disqualifying out loud raises bookings among the people who do qualify, and it raises show rate, because anyone who books has just self-selected against your own stated exclusions.

It also makes the call easier. They arrive having already agreed they're the right fit.

The form

Seven fields. Every one earns its place by either reaching them or qualifying them.

FIELD	TYPE	WHY IT'S THERE
First name	Text	Every message after this uses it
Email	Email	Confirmation and calendar invite
Phone	Phone, required	The whole show-up system runs on SMS
What are you trying to sort out?	Short text	Their words. Opens the call
How many days a week can you realistically train?	1 / 2 / 3 / 4+	Under 2 is a decline
Coaching that fits is likely [RANGE] a month. Is that workable?	Yes / Not right now	The single most valuable field
How soon do you want to start?	Now / 1 month / Just looking	Sorts your call order

THE BUDGET QUESTION IS NOT OPTIONAL

On Path A you find out someone's budget in the DM. On Path B, if you don't ask here, you find out twenty minutes into a call you paid $140 for.

Phrase it as a check, not a demand — "is that workable?" — and put a real range in. It costs you some bookings and every one it costs you was a call you'd have wanted back.

Anyone answering "not right now" still gets booked, just into your low-priority slots, and goes onto the nurture sequence instead.

Form first, calendar second. Qualify, then show times. A calendar embedded above the form lets unqualified people book straight into your week.

The thank-you page

Same job as the Path A confirmation: one instruction, not congratulations.

THANK-YOU PAGE COPY

You're booked for [DAY, TIME].

Check your phone — I've just sent a text. Reply Y so I know you've got it.

Before we talk, have a think about one thing: what would you want to be different in 90 days? Not a number — just what you'd notice day to day.

That reply-Y line matters more here than anywhere else in the product. Path B's show rate is 20 points below Path A's, and this is the cheapest point you can claw any of it back.

Booking page and calendar

Both paths land here. Most coaches lose a third of their booked calls to settings they have never looked at.

Calendar settings

Booking window	Next 3 days only
Minimum notice	2 hours
Slot length	30 minutes
Buffer after	15 minutes
Max per day	4
Phone number	Required field
Time zone	Auto-detect from visitor
Reschedule link	On
Cancel link	Off

WHY THREE DAYS, NOT THREE WEEKS

Show rate falls roughly with every day between booking and call. A call booked for next Thursday is a call they have already half forgotten.

A short window feels busy, which is also true — you are only taking four a day.

Reschedule on, cancel off. Someone who can't make it will either move it or vanish. Make moving it the easy option and you keep the appointment instead of losing the lead.

What the booking page must say

- What actually happens on the call — in one line, plainly
- How long — and keep to it
- Who you are — one photo, one sentence of credibility
- One testimonial — ideally the answer to interview question 4
- What it is not — "this isn't a hard sell" if that's true

A 20-minute call about your situation.

I'll ask what you've tried, what's getting in the way, and what you want to be different in 90 days. Then I'll tell you what I'd do — and whether I'm the right person to do it with you.

No presentation, no pressure. If it's not a fit I'll say so and point you somewhere better.

Use the phone number you actually answer. I'll call that one.

The confirmation page

Don't waste it on "thanks, you're booked." Give them one job.

CONFIRMATION PAGE COPY

You're booked for [DAY, TIME].

Check your phone — I've just sent a text. Reply Y to it so I know you've got it.

Before we talk, have a think about one thing: what would you want to be different in 90 days? Not a number — just what you'd notice day to day.

That reply-Y instruction is the start of the show-up system, and it is the highest-leverage sentence on the page.

SECTION 13

The show-up system

The cheapest money in the whole funnel. Going from 50% to 75% show rate cuts your cost per held call by a third and costs you nothing in ad spend.

Seven touches

WHEN	CHANNEL	JOB
Within 60 seconds	SMS	Get a reply out of them
Within 5 minutes	Email	Calendar file and the detail
Same day	DM	A human line from you
Day before, 6pm	SMS	Confirm it's still on
1 hour before	SMS	Prime them
5 minutes before	SMS	Remove the last excuse
8 minutes after a no-show	Call, then SMS	Recover the appointment

The copy

1 — SMS, WITHIN 60 SECONDS

Hey [FIRST NAME], it's [YOUR NAME]. You're booked for [DAY] at [TIME] — I'll call this number.

Reply Y so I know you've got this 👍

WHY THE REPLY MATTERS MORE THAN THE REMINDER

Someone who has typed one character back has made a small commitment to a person. That single reply is the biggest step up in show rate of anything in this section.

If they don't reply within two hours, send: "Just checking this number's right for [DAY] ?" A non-reply is your earliest warning of a no-show — chase it now, not on the day.

2 — EMAIL, WITHIN 5 MINUTES

Subject: Your call — [DAY] at [TIME]

Hi [FIRST NAME],

Booked in for [DAY, DATE] at [TIME]. Calendar invite attached. I'll call [THEIR NUMBER].

It's 20 minutes. I'll ask what you've tried, what's in the way, and what you want different in 90 days — then tell you what I'd do and whether I'm the right fit.

One thing to think about: what would you notice day to day if this were sorted? That's where we'll start.

Can't make it, use this to move it: [RESCHEDULE LINK] — just don't leave me hanging.

[YOUR NAME]

3 — DM, SAME DAY

Just saw you booked for [DAY] — nice one. Looking forward to it.

Anything you specifically want me to cover, send it over beforehand and I'll come prepared.

4 — SMS, DAY BEFORE AT 6PM

Hey [FIRST NAME] — still good for [TIME] tomorrow?

If something's come up just say and we'll move it, no problem.

Offering the reschedule is counter-intuitive and it raises net held calls. You trade a handful of moved calls for far fewer silent no-shows.

5 — SMS, 1 HOUR BEFORE

Speaking in an hour [FIRST NAME]. Have a think on that question — what would be different in 90 days?

6 — SMS, 5 MINUTES BEFORE

Calling you in 5 👍 Grab somewhere you can talk for 20.

7 — NO-SHOW RECOVERY

At +8 min, call again. A third of no-shows answer the second call.

Then SMS: Tried you just now — guessing something came up. Want to grab [TOMORROW, TIME] instead? [RESCHEDULE LINK]

Next day: Still worth a conversation, [FIRST NAME]? Happy to work around you — just send a day that suits.

+3 days, last one: I'll stop chasing 😊 If you want to pick it up, message me any time. Either way, good luck with it.

The pre-call question

Notice it appears five times: on the confirmation page, in the email, in the DM, an hour before, and as the opening of the call itself.

It does two jobs. It gives them a reason to show that isn't about you, and it means they arrive having already pictured the outcome — which makes the call shorter and the close easier.

Never ask for homework that takes effort. A form to fill in or a food diary lowers show rate. One question they can answer in the shower raises it.

- ☐ SMS fires within 60 seconds of booking
- ☐ It asks for a one-character reply
- ☐ Non-repliers chased within 2 hours
- ☐ Day-before SMS offers the reschedule
- ☐ 5-minute warning sends
- ☐ Second call at +8 minutes, not just a text
- ☐ Pre-call question appears in all five places
- ☐ Cancel link disabled, reschedule link live

Optimization

What to change, when, and — mostly — when to leave it alone.

The first rule: change nothing for 72 hours or 50 conversations, whichever comes later. Every edit restarts the learning phase. Most accounts are ruined by their owner on day two.

Diagnose by symptom — Path A, the DM funnel

WHAT YOU SEE	WHAT IT MEANS	WHAT TO DO
Click-through under 1%	The hook isn't landing	Three new first lines on the same video
Click-through fine, no conversations	Ad and offer don't match	Rewrite the ad to match what you actually sell
Conversations start, nobody replies	Auto-reply is doing the wrong job	Open with a question, not an acknowledgement
Conversations don't become calls	Qualifying or the transition	Two specific times, never a bare link
Calls booked, nobody shows	No show-up system	Section 13, all seven touches
They show, nobody buys	Price, or the wrong people	Tighten qualifying before touching price
Cost per conversation climbing	Creative fatigue	New creative. Frequency above 2.5 confirms it
CPM spiked overnight	Auction, seasonal, or a policy flag	Check account quality, then wait 48h
Spend won't leave the ad set	Audience too narrow or budget too low	Empty the interests, widen the location
One ad eating everything	Working as designed	Leave it. Build variations of the winner

Diagnose by symptom — Path B, the call funnel

WHAT YOU SEE	WHAT IT MEANS	WHAT TO DO
Clicks fine, nobody fills the form	Page doesn't match the ad	The headline must repeat the ad's promise almost word for word
Form started, not finished	Too many fields, or the budget question landed cold	Seven fields maximum. Put the budget question second to last
Forms submitted, no bookings	Calendar sits behind another click	Show times on the thank-you page itself, not in an email
Bookings but terrible show rate	Normal for Path B — and fixable	Section 13, all seven touches. Expect 45–65% without it
Cost per lead climbing after week 2	Creative fatigue, faster here than Path A	New creative. Pages tire audiences quicker than DMs do
Stuck in learning phase	Optimising for an event you get 3 of a week	Switch to Lead, or raise budget. Section 3
Meta reports more bookings than your calendar shows	Normal attribution gap	Trust the calendar. That's why the UTMs are there
Lots of unqualified bookings	No budget question, or the range is too low	Add it, or raise the stated range

When to scale

All three must be true:

- 1. Cost per booked call is under your ceiling from Section 2
- 2. At least 20 booked calls of data
- 3. Show rate above 60%

HOW TO SCALE

Raise the daily budget 20–30%, then wait 4 days. If cost per call holds, raise again.

Doubling the budget overnight resets learning and usually costs you a week.

When to kill

KILL	WHEN
An ad	Spent 2× your target cost per conversation with none
An ad set	Spent 3× your target cost per booked call with none
The whole test	$600 spent, no booked call, and Sections 5, 9 and 13 all verified

THE HONEST READ AT $600

Six hundred dollars with tracking verified, DMs answered inside five minutes and the reminder system live, and still no booked call, is not an ads problem. It is an offer problem.

Go back to Section 2. Either your ceiling was never high enough, or what you are selling isn't what this audience wants to buy. More budget will not fix either, and will cost you another $600 to confirm.

The creative calendar

Creative volume is what decides whether you can ever scale past a few hundred a day. Build the habit now, at $20.

DAILY SPEND	NEW CREATIVES PER MONTH
$20	4–6
$100	10–15
$300	30–50

Three new hooks on an existing winner counts as three creatives. That is the cheapest and most reliable way to hit these numbers.

SECTION 15

The weekly scorecard

Four numbers, once a week, same day. Everything else on the dashboard is there to distract you.

NUMBER	HOW TO GET IT	AIM FOR
Cost per conversation	Spend ÷ conversations started	$4–12
Conversation to booked	Calls booked ÷ conversations	15–30%
Show rate	Calls held ÷ calls booked	70%+
Close rate	Clients ÷ calls held	25%+

IF YOU RUN PATH B AS WELL

NUMBER	HOW TO GET IT	AIM FOR
Cost per landing page click	Spend ÷ link clicks	$1.50–3.00
Page to form submit	Forms ÷ page views	10–25%
Form to booked	Bookings ÷ forms	40–70%
Show rate	Held ÷ booked	55%+ — lower than Path A, by nature

Compare the two paths on cost per call held, never booked. Path A books cheaper and shows up better; Path B costs more per booking and runs without you. Only the held number settles which is actually working.

$$\text{Cost per booked call} = \text{Spend} \div \text{Calls booked}$$

That one number, against your ceiling from Section 2, is the entire scoreboard. Under your ceiling, scale. Over it, the four numbers above tell you which stage is broken.

Fill this in every week

Week ending	_____
Spend	$ _____
Conversations started	_____
Calls booked	_____
Calls held	_____
Clients signed	_____
Cost per booked call	$ _____
Your ceiling	$ _____
Verdict	Scale / Fix / Stop

IGNORE THESE, GENUINELY

Impressions, reach, CTR, CPC, engagement, video views, follower growth.

None of them pay you. They are diagnostic at best — CTR tells you something about a hook when you already know conversations are expensive — and the rest of the time they are a way to feel busy while the only number that matters goes unexamined.

A campaign with a 4% click-through and no booked calls is a failing campaign.

Same day, every week, 15 minutes. Checking daily makes you tamper; checking monthly means you burn three weeks on a broken funnel. Weekly is the rhythm that matches how fast the data actually arrives.

SECTION 16

Troubleshooting

The twenty things that break, and what to do about each.

ACCOUNT AND POLICY

PROBLEM	FIX
Ad rejected, health policy	Remove any reference to the reader's body or weight. Talk about your clients and your work instead (Section 6)
Ad account restricted	Request review once. Don't create a second account — that compounds it. Meanwhile check 2FA and payment methods
Page flagged	Remove before/after images from recent posts, then request review
Payment failed, ads off	Add the backup card. This is why you added two
Can't verify domain	DNS TXT can take 72 hours. If it won't take, use the HTML file upload method instead

TRACKING

PROBLEM	FIX
Pixel not firing	Check it's on every page including the confirmation page. Pixel Helper tells you where it's missing
Events show Browser only	CAPI isn't connected. Turn on the native integration in your booking tool
Conversions counted twice	Add a deduplication event ID, or you have the pixel installed twice
Return column shows nothing	You're sending events without a value. Section 5
Events Manager shows nothing at all	Run the test transaction in a private window. Ad blockers hide your own events from you

DELIVERY

PROBLEM	FIX
Zero spend after 24 hours	Audience too small or ads still in review. Empty the interests, widen the location
Stuck in learning phase	You're editing too often. 50 conversions a week gets you out — raise budget or stop touching it
CPM doubled	Check account quality first. If clean, wait 48 hours before reacting
Frequency above 3	Audience exhausted. New creative, or widen the location
Spend all on one ad	Normal. That's the algorithm finding the winner

CONVERSION

PROBLEM	FIX
Conversations start, nobody replies	Your auto-reply isn't asking a question. Section 9, Step 1
Good chats, no bookings	You're sending a link instead of offering two specific times
Bookings, no shows	Section 13. Start with the 60-second SMS asking for a reply
Everyone asks the price immediately	Your ad promised a price. Promise a conversation instead
Shows but nobody buys	Qualify harder in the DM before you book. Volume of calls isn't the goal

IF YOU'RE STUCK AND NOTHING ABOVE FITS

Work the funnel backwards, not forwards. Start at the last stage that works and look at the one immediately after it.

Almost every "ads don't work for me" turns out to be one specific stage: no tracking, a slow DM reply, or no show-up system. In that order of likelihood.

The Booked Call Engine — work sections 1, 3, 7 and 9 before you blame the ads. They are where the money is, and they are the four that almost nobody does properly.
